

TeleCheck® Check on Delivery Service

When businesses render services before payment is received, they can still offer the same flexibility to customers that conventional merchants can, without increased risk or check handling costs.

The Challenge

Companies that accept checks on delivery range from business-to-business suppliers to pizza delivery companies, but they all have one thing in common: they provide their services on good faith that payment will be forthcoming. Some limit payment options to cashier's check or cash, but that doesn't serve all of your customers.

The Solution

The TeleCheck® Check on Delivery service allows you to get authorization to accept a check before incurring the costs of pulling and shipping goods or putting valuable time into a project. With extensive screening from TeleCheck, you can have greater confidence in accepting checks, including those from new customers.

Here's How It Works

Customers provide basic check details to merchants, who in turn contact TeleCheck for guidance. The transaction is treated like a paper check transaction and the risk scoring tools are utilized to determine the likelihood of a returned check.
